Dear Wesley.

Your letter and writings on social credit arrived today. I am sure they have been a long time on the way. The picture is very good of you.

I read your writings but can't say I can make any sense out of it. I can see that government can very well eliminate bank loans & interest by issuing government credit as has been done, but I can't see where it has any connection with religion or offers any salvation to the world. If you are interested in economics why don't you take a university course in economics?

We are all well here. Evelyn and I are very happy together. I am sure you must know of our marriage although your letters never mention it. She is a very smart woman and holds the very important position in our city Health Department of director of Maternal and Child Health. She is of course a physician with specialist's training in Pediatrics. I am also a certified specialist in Occupational Medicine and entitled to place the following letters after my name - M.D., F.A.C.P.M.

Robert & James are getting A's in their academic subjects at school. Warren is doing well too. The last I heard both your mother and father are quite poorly and barely able to look after themselves. Yours Wilford!
